DALLAS – June 27, 2017 – CNM Connect (CNM) has recently been awarded three significant grants from the Amon G. Carter and Sid W. Richardson Foundations. The Amon G. Carter Foundation granted CNM $25,000 for the general operations of the organization’s Fort Worth campus and $25,000 in support of CNM-pact®, CNM’s new outcomes-based consulting and technology services. The Sid W. Richardson Foundation granted CNM $50,000 for general operating support for the Fort Worth campus.

CNM works with nonprofits and other stakeholders in the community to help them be better connected, engaged and equipped to tackle issues in a meaningful way by providing management training, certificate programs, executive recruiting, leadership consulting and outcomes and evaluation consulting and technology services to nonprofits of all sizes and causes.

“The Carter Foundation values the expertise CNM brings to nonprofit organizations and the individuals and entities that support their ongoing work,” said John H. Robinson, Executive Vice President Amon G. Carter Foundation. “We appreciate the continuing commitment being made to incorporate the entire North Texas region into CNM’s program offerings and service area.”

“We are grateful to have earned the support of two very prominent Foundations. Our ongoing and longtime partnership with the Amon G. Carter and Sid W. Richardson Foundations is essential to the success of our Fort Worth campus,” said Tina K. Weinfurther, President and CEO CNM Connect. “Through this collaboration, CNM is better able to serve the nonprofit community in Tarrant County and bring affordable and critical performance building services to those organizations to help them make an even greater community impact.”

CNM-pact is the latest addition to CNM’s services for nonprofits regardless of size, mission or location. CNM-pact, combined with CNM consulting services and tools, equips nonprofits with greater insight into their data. CNM’s consultants work alongside the nonprofits’ staff to develop strong evaluation plans and protocols to better optimize their community impact. The web-based platform allows participating nonprofits the ability to securely access their program results anywhere, anytime, on any platform to demonstrate to their stakeholders that their programs are working.
